ILLUSTRATED RECORD OF THE INDUSTRY OF ALL NATIONS, NEW YORK EXHIBITION.

Edited by Prof. B. Silliman, Jun., aided by eminent writers in each department of relence and art. Published in the Crystal Palace, by G. P. Putnam & Co., 10 Park place.

This journal, as its name implies, will record the history, progress and results of the new York industrial Exhibition. The literary portion of the paper will be prepared under competent editorial supervision by the ablest literary, scientific, and practical men, and will include essays, descriptions, and criticisms in the following departments,—

I.—Manhisery.

II.—Manufactures—in subdivisions.

IV.—Fine Arts.

General essays may be expected on the condition and results of the several departments, on the natural resources of our country, and on the Lethods by which they may be made most available to American art, and to artistic and industrial manufactures. Other articles of a more general scope, on topics naturally suggested by the exhibition, will be canaionally admitted. It is intended that all the descriptions and criticisms shall be accurate, and strictly imparial and independent. The essays will be as free as possible from mere technicallities, and every effort will be made to render them attractive and interesting to general readers.

made to reader tuesh assessed and the letter-press will be illustrated by ongravings of the most beautiful, interesting, and suggestive of the various objects excibited, including, as far as possible, all such as man gratify and instruct. Our Turkish Correspon CONSTANTINOPLE, May 29, 1853. The Departure of Prince Menschikoff and its Effect

The New Minister of Foreign Affairs - The Greek Church—The Turkish Army and Navy.
The departure of Prince Menschikoff and his suite

from Constantinople is mentioned in the official paper of the government (Journal de Constantinople) of the 19th of May, in the following language :-

"It might be supposed that after the solution of the points of difference relating to the question of the Holy Places, none other would arise to place in doubt the concord existing between the Sublime Porte and Russia, her old friend and ally. We have the profound regret to announce that it has not been thus, notwithstanding the good-will which the Imperial Government may have brought to bear upon this matter, the great need of which was felt by all the vorld. Prince Menschikoff, Ambassador Extraordipary of Russia, having asked, after this solution and in the way of an u'timatum, a treaty which should contain a stipulation for the maintenance of the privileges and immunities of the Greek Church which ave remained intact since 1453, when the Imperial Government established them of its own full and free will, the Sublime Porte, after six conucils of its ministers, (all the great functionaries in activity and in non-activity having assisted at the two last,) saw itself in the painful obligation, from respect for the dignity of the Czar and the treaty of 1840—signed by all the five great powers, made in view of assuring the independence of the Ottoman Empire-not to acquiesce in the demand of Prince Menschikoff. We hope, nevertheless, that the sincere and conciliating ntentions of the Imperial Government, which for so long a time strived to adopt the means of giving a greater developement to the measures already taken to secure the well being and tranquillity of all the Christian population of the empire-measures, which are about to receive their completion, of which as assurance was given by the Porte to Prince Menschi. koff, as well as to the representatives of the other Princes—we hope, we say, that these intentions of the Imperial Government will be appreciated by His Majesty the Emperor of Russia with the loyalty and the justice of mind which distinguishes this monarch to so eminent a degree, and that the relations of friendship of the two courts will not at all

"It is asserted that in consequence of this de agreed upon definitively yesterday, and which could only be considered as a matter of absolute necessity, Prince Menschikoff will leave Constantinople to-mor be changed by a decision based upon the most es-sential rights of the throne of His Imperial Majesty the Sultan, and the most important rights of the row, with all the members of his embassy.

"It is much to be regretted that the Prince, who, before the expiration of the five days fixed upon for the definitive reply of the imperial government, handed in yesterday, in the afternoon, a last note announcing the suspension of political relations between the two States, and that he has not waited before doing so the definitive answer, which was ready in the period before stated—an answer, which would have fully convinced him that the Sublime Porte has the firm resolution to give, in virtue of its independent sovereignty, a complete satisfaction, not only to the interests of the Greek Church, but also to the interests of all the other Christian communities; which would have, it is not doubted, prevented him from adopting the regretted determination which we

The same official paper next adds :-

"The day before yesterday and yesterday the Council of Ministers was held at the Porte, under the presidency of the Grand Vizier. All the high functionaries, inactivity and in non-activity, took part in t. The Ministers discussed the subject of the quesions pending between the Sublime Porte and Russia. To-day there is a Ri Kiale (Privy Council) at the imperial palace of Teheragian, on the occasion of the elevation of Mustapha Pasha to the post of Grand Vizier. After the Council, the Ministers met in council in the presence of his Imperial Majesty the Sultan. The Council lasted for several hours." The Ambassador of the great despot of Europe ha have existed between the Porte and Russia since the Treaty of Adrianople in 1813, and removed with him all the members of the Russian mission except the Chancellery, which is left to protect the subjects and the commerce of the Emperor. He came for the evident purpose of bullying the Turks, and to browbeat them into acquiescing into demands which would scarce leave the Sultan a shadow of independence. To intercede officiously in behalf of the Greeks, the co-religionists of the Emperor, and to use his friendly influence with the Sultan for the preservation of the privileges and immunities which the Sultan and his forefathers have been pleased to give to the Greek subjects of the Porte, would have been more successful, and met with more success. No sovereign in Europe possesses kindlier feelings, or is more just than the Sultan towards his own sub jects. During his reign he has accorded to them privileges which their fathers certainly never possessed. In the imperial rescript called that of Gal Haneh, from the place where it was read and proclaimed by Rechid Pacha in 1840, is comprised all the principles of the Magna Charta of England, and many of those of the Constitution of the United States. It was found impracticable to put all of them into force in a country, or rather among a people, not yet cal-pable of appreciating them or of controlling them-selves, when freed from the iron rule of proud Sultans, and consequently many of them fell into disnse, yet none have been withdrawn or abolished; and it is not improbable that, as the people of Turkey have since then become much improved and more enlightened on the score of political rights and duties, it is now designed by the same able Minister and generous Sultan to revive them in such a manner as will best adapt them to the minds and feelings of the people, and cover all the ground which Menschikoff thought to compel the Porte to go over in a treaty with him. The Journal de Constantinople says, in a previous number to the one above alluded to, when speaking of the nomination of Rechid Pacha to the post of Minister of Foreign Affairs:—"In grave circum-stances it is necessary to be careful of words. The ministry is modified, but it remains the same; all the members who, yesterday even, composed it, remain in the councils of His Imperial Majesty, the Sultan, with different posts for some of them, and an additional strength for all by the nomination of Rechid Pacha, whose pame and high estimation are known all over Europe. Each one of them, by nobly per forming, up to the present time, his duty, under very difficult circumstances, have only had in view the interests of the country—the dignity and the covereign rights of the crown. The turn of Rechid Pacha to power, is the sarest guarantee that the ministry will continue to do its duty with the same moderation, and the same sentiments of uprightness and security. In civilized times, strength consists in right—the latter commands the respect to all, and to every one."

The Greek church is truly corrupt enough, and its patriarch, bishops, and clergy are more bigotted and besetted than the members of any church on the face of the globe, including the religion of the grand Llama of Thibet. Drunkards, liars, and fornicators are abundant, and simony is rife in it; but this is by no means due to the Ottoman government. It is more than questionable whether this would diminish under Russian influence. But, be this as it may, the Emperor of Russia, peaceful as he may be, has certainly no right to send an ambassador, as haughty as
